Close to the centre of town, Bermondsey Heights is at the heart of the action. Over the last few years, the area around London Bridge has seen an explosion of eateries centred on Borough Market (a true food lovers' paradise) and all overlooked by the spectacular Shard.

There's also Hay's Galleria. Originally a 17th century wharf, it's now a stunning architectural space that attracts lovers of culture and cuisine with its world-class food, superb shopping and great entertainment.

With Rye Lane at its heart, it's one of the trendiest parts of London, and the perfect place for anyone into great food and drink, quirky street art, brilliant record stores and amazing farmers' markets.

When you want to ease back a bit, Dulwich Village with its leafy streets, elegant art gallery, world-famous college and lovely old pubs feels like another time and place.
